Organizations often view Environmental, Health and Safety (EHS) Compliance as a necessary evil, best left to the specialists who will “Tell us what we have to do.” Instead, organizations must develop an internal culture that promotes continuous improvement in Safety and Environmental compliance.

Continuous Improvement is no different from any other journey: Before you can decide where you need to go, you must determine where you are. To improve EHS culture, every member of the organization must understand their role in promoting a safe work environment and be actively engaged daily.

Teresa Preston is the owner of EHS Made Easy. After graduating in the first class of females at the US Merchant Marine Academy, she spent the first eleven years of her career as an oceangoing ship’s officer. She then worked in both government and private industry until starting her own company. She has extensive experience in Environmental Management, Safety and Health compliance and integration of EHS and Lean Manufacturing. Some of the services that she provides include:

- Team training to Integrate EHS decisions into all aspects of business using Lean Manufacturing methods such as 5 – S and Value Stream Mapping.
- Compliance Audits and Site Assessments, including benchmarking tools for performance improvement.
- Safety and Environmental Compliance Training uniquely customized for each employer using photos and findings from site assessments.
- Job Safety Analysis training for all levels of employees.
- OSHA Outreach Training
- On-site drills and exercises designed to test your emergency plans.
